

Multiple Choice

1. Answer: C

Options: A) Product features.; B) SIC code.; C) Perceptual maps.; D) Organizational characteristics.

Note: Perceptual maps visually represent how consumers perceive different brands based on various attributes, making them essential tools in the positioning process.

2. Answer: C

Options: A) Laissez-faire; B) Democratic; C) Authoritarian; D) A mix of laissez-faire and democratic

Note: The authoritarian leadership style led to increased productivity in Lewin, Lippert, and White's experiment because it established clear directives and control, resulting in participants feeling more focused and driven to meet specific goals.

3. Answer: C

Options: A) Portfolio analysis.; B) Environmental scanning.; C) Strategic marketing.; D) Marketing research.

Note: Strategic marketing is the process that involves analyzing market conditions and customer needs to develop targeted approaches for competing effectively and delivering value to customers.

4. Answer: A

Options: A) Guiding, mentoring and motivating; B) Guiding, commanding and motivating; C) Guiding, demonstrating and motivating; D) Guiding, mentoring and demonstrating

Note: The correct answer identifies the key characteristics of transactional leaders as guiding, mentoring, and motivating because these traits are essential for fostering an environment of productivity and engagement within a structured framework, which is central to transactional leadership's focus on achieving specific goals through clear rewards and expectations.

5. Answer: B

Options: A) Direct marketing.; B) Public relations.; C) Sale promotion.; D) Advertising

Note: Public relations is the practice of managing communication between an organization and its stakeholders to shape public perception and foster a positive image.

True / False

6. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Promotional writing typically employs a more fluid structure that prioritizes engaging and persuasive language rather than adhering to a rigid pyramid format.

7. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Ingratiation is not one of the four categories of persuasive crisis communication strategies identified by W. Timothy Coombs, which include denial, diminishing, rebuilding, and bolstering.

8. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Infomediaries are indeed internet-based organizations that act as intermediaries by aggregating, filtering, and delivering valuable information to both channel members and end-users to facilitate informed decision-making.

9. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Commercial media also aim to build brand awareness, engagement, and long-term relationships with consumers, not just immediate actions and purchases.

10. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: The mission statement articulates the fundamental reason for an organization's existence, providing a framework for decision-making and strategic planning that aligns with its core values and objectives.

Long Form Response

11. Answer: Civil society organizations (CSOs) can employ three contrasting tactics to achieve their objectives: indirect action, violent direct action, and non-violent direct action, such as boycotts. Indirect action often involves lobbying and advocacy efforts aimed at influencing policy through established political channels, which can foster sustainable change but may be slow and depend on the willingness of policymakers. In contrast, violent direct action, while potentially drawing immediate attention to issues, often leads to backlash and can undermine the legitimacy of the cause, alienating potential supporters. Non-violent direct action, including boycotts, seeks to leverage economic pressure to effect change without resorting to violence, often garnering broader public support and maintaining moral high ground. Each approach carries distinct implications for public perception, sustainability of the movement, and overall effectiveness in achieving the desired outcomes.

Note: correct because it effectively identifies and distinguishes between three contrasting tactics-indirect action, violent direct action, and non-violent direct action-while also discussing their implications for civil society organizations in achieving their goals, thereby demonstrating a comprehensive understanding of the strategies and their potential impacts.

12. Answer: In a business setting, group roles are essential components that define the responsibilities and behaviors of individuals within a team. These roles can range from leadership and facilitation to specialized tasks like research or analysis. By clearly delineating group roles, teams can enhance their efficiency and cohesion, as each member understands their contributions and expectations. Additionally, well-defined roles help mitigate conflicts and ensure that all perspectives are considered, which can lead to improved decision-making. Ultimately, the influence of group roles on dynamics fosters an environment where individual performance is maximized, as members feel accountable and empowered in their designated functions.

Note: The answer correctly emphasizes that clearly defined group roles in a business setting enhance team efficiency and cohesion by clarifying individual contributions, reducing conflicts, and ensuring diverse perspectives are considered, all of which positively influence group dynamics and individual performance.