Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Qualitative research methods prioritize understanding human experiences and social phenomena through in-depth, open-ended questions and non-numerical data, rather than focusing on numerical data collection from many respondents.

10. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: A strategic business unit is designed to operate independently and manage its own strategy and resources, allowing it to concentrate on particular markets or products within the broader context of a corporation.

Long Form Response

11. Answer: Integrated Marketing Communications (IMC) is a strategic approach that seeks to unify all marketing communication tools, channels, and messages to ensure a consistent brand message across various platforms. By integrating diverse marketing efforts-such as advertising, public relations, social media, and direct marketing-IMC enhances brand recognition and loyalty. This consistency is crucial because it reinforces the brand's identity and values, making it easier for consumers to understand and connect with the brand. Moreover, IMC allows organizations to maximize their marketing impact by providing a cohesive narrative that resonates with target audiences, ultimately leading to increased engagement and sales. In today's fragmented media landscape, the role of IMC is more vital than ever in maintaining clarity and coherence in brand communication.

Note: correct because it effectively defines Integrated Marketing Communications (IMC) as a strategic approach that aligns various marketing channels to create a consistent brand message, emphasizing its importance for brand recognition and consumer understanding.

12. Answer: Broadcast media plays a crucial role in advertising by providing a dynamic platform for demonstrating product benefits and amplifying the effectiveness of marketing messages. Through visual and auditory elements, advertisements can showcase a product's features, usability, and emotional appeal, making it easier for consumers to understand its value. For instance, television commercials can depict products in real-life scenarios, allowing viewers to visualize their benefits in context. Additionally, the wide reach of broadcast media helps advertisers connect with diverse audiences, enhancing brand awareness and recall. Ultimately, the immersive nature of broadcast media not only captivates viewers but also reinforces the intended marketing message, leading to increased consumer engagement and, ultimately, sales.

Note: correct because it emphasizes how broadcast media utilizes visual and auditory elements to effectively illustrate product benefits and enhance marketing messages by placing them in relatable contexts for consumers.
