

Multiple Choice (10 marks)

1. What are, according to Wood (1991), the three outcomes of CSR?
 - (a) Social policies, Social programmes and Social impacts
 - (b) Social evaluations, Social programmes and Social impacts
 - (c) Social policies, Social evidencing and Social impacts
 - (d) Social policies, Social programmes and Social analysis
2. Of what is individual freedom to schedule work an example?
 - (a) Job design
 - (b) Job enrichment
 - (c) Job rate
 - (d) Job planning
3. Which of the following elements is not part of Porter's Five Forces model for industry competitiveness?
 - (a) Threat of substitutes.
 - (b) Threat of suppliers.
 - (c) Power of buyers.
 - (d) Threat from government.
4. According to Macnamara's (2005) pyramid of evaluation, at which stage is the situation analysis done and used to form objectives and implementation plans?
 - (a) Inputs
 - (b) Outputs
 - (c) Outtakes
 - (d) Outcomes
5. Which of the following is not a recognised type of plan?
 - (a) Business
 - (b) Succession
 - (c) Ad hoc
 - (d) Financial

True / False (10 marks)

Answer True or False

6. True or False: Toyota's Prius and Honda's hybrid Civic were developed due to social pressure for more fuel-efficient vehicles with lower emissions.
7. True or False: Post-purchase re-evaluation primarily assesses the selling success experienced by the vendor after the transaction.
8. True or False: Personal values are stable individual beliefs about desirable behaviors and goals that significantly influence decision making.
9. True or False: Processes are the primary elements that indicate the operational status of an organisation.
10. True or False: Inelastic demand occurs when the quantity demanded barely changes with a change in price.

Long Form Response (20 marks)

Answer each question with a clear and complete explanation.

11. Discuss the concept of corporate transparency and analyze its significance in fostering trust among stakeholders in modern business practices.
12. Discuss the concept of work specialization in business administration and analyze its impact on productivity and employee workload within an organization.

End of Paper