

Multiple Choice (10 marks)

1. It is correct to state about the epidemiology of Anorexia Nervosa that:
 - (a) Females are three times more affected than males
 - (b) It never happens in children or post menopausal women
 - (c) Males from any socioeconomic background can be affected
 - (d) Prevalence rates are 2% for female adolescents
2. Which of the following diseases does obesity increase the risk of developing?
 - (a) Type 2 diabetes
 - (b) Cancer
 - (c) Cardiovascular disease
 - (d) All of the options given are correct
3. Fibre supplements
 - (a) May be helpful in diverticular disease
 - (b) Are always easily fermented by colonic bacteria
 - (c) Are usually derived from soluble fibre sources
 - (d) Should be avoided in constipation
4. The stomach lining contains several types of cells. Which statement about them is correct?
 - (a) Mucous cells secrete the glycoprotein mucin
 - (b) Chief cells the hormone gastrin (which stimulates acid secretion).
 - (c) Parietal cells secrete pepsinogen, the inactive precursor of pepsin
 - (d) G Cells secrete hydrochloric acid
5. Which of the following statements is true:
 - (a) Childhood stunting before 24 months of age affects short term cognitive performance
 - (b) Childhood stunting before 24 months of age affects long term cognitive performance
 - (c) Neither of the statements are correct
 - (d) Both of the statements are correct

True / False (10 marks)

Answer True or False

6. True or False: Gut microbes convert L-carnitine into choline, a compound that protects against cardiovascular disease.
7. True or False: The action of parathyroid hormone on the intestine decreases plasma calcium concentration.
8. True or False: Leucine, methionine, and threonine are essential amino acids that must be obtained through the diet.
9. True or False: BMI does not differentiate between fat mass and fat-free mass, which limits its accuracy in assessing body fat.
10. True or False: Irritable bowel syndrome (IBS) may be associated with constipation in some individuals.

Long Form Response (20 marks)

Answer each question with a clear and complete explanation.

11. Discuss the various factors and mechanisms involved in the absorption of vitamins from the intestine, and explain why a comprehensive understanding of this process is essential for health.
12. Discuss the role of adipose tissue as the largest endogenous substrate source in the body, including its functions, significance, and impact on overall health.

End of Paper