

Multiple Choice

1. Answer: E

Options: A) Tradition; B) Clerical authority; C) Ethical principles; D) Historical context; E) Divine inspiration

Note: The correct answer is "Divine inspiration" because Islamic jurisprudence, or fiqh, primarily relies on sources such as the Quran, Hadith, consensus (ijma), and analogy (qiyas) rather than on divine inspiration, which is typically associated with prophetic revelation.

2. Answer: A

Options: A) affirms the antecedent or denies the consequent; B) leads to an invalid conclusion; C) generalizes a specific case; D) includes three or more alternatives; E) contradicts the conclusion

Note: A valid disjunctive syllogism requires a major premise that presents two mutually exclusive options, allowing the conclusion to be drawn by affirming one option or denying the other, thus confirming the validity of the argument.

3. Answer: A

Options: A) a capitalist.; B) a feminist.; C) an anarchist.; D) a socialist.; E) a distributionist.

Note: Van den Haag is considered a capitalist because his philosophical views advocate for individual property rights and the belief in free markets as essential components of a just society.

4. Answer: A

Options: A) Eighteenth century CE; B) Eleventh century BCE; C) First century CE; D) Fifth century BCE; E) Second century CE

Note: The first Jaina temples emerged in the eighteenth century CE as a significant development in Jaina architecture and religious practice, marking a period of artistic and spiritual expression in the tradition.

5. Answer: A

Options: A) contrast originating a harmful sequence with allowing a harmful sequence to continue.; B) all of the above; C) demonstrate the difference between passive and active harm.; D) argue that good intentions can result in harmful sequences.; E) show that harmful sequences can be stopped by good intentions.

Note: The correct answer highlights the philosophical distinction between actively initiating harm, as represented in Foot's Rescue I case, and passively permitting harm to persist, as illustrated in Rescue II, thereby emphasizing the moral implications of both actions and inactions.

True / False

6. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Guru Nanak and his successors utilized specific Sikh Ragas in their teachings and hymns to instill a sense of spiritual discipline and communal order among followers, reinforcing the central role of music in Sikh worship and philosophy.

7. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Feinberg argues that hunger specifically drives the desire for food rather than thirst for water, as these desires stem from distinct physiological needs.

8. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Baier argues that genuine moral rules should encompass the interests of all living beings to promote a more inclusive ethical framework that acknowledges the interconnectedness of life and the moral consideration owed to all sentient beings.

9. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Wolf argues that morality transcends cultural norms and is essential for evaluating actions and guiding behavior, thus affirming its significance in our conduct.

10. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Gauthier argues that moral agreements are based on rational cooperation and mutual advantage rather than solely on maximizing overall happiness, which distinguishes his view from utilitarianism.

Long Form Response

11. Answer: The act of wearing the hijab in contemporary society carries significant philosophical implications, particularly when examined through the lens of Islamic superiority. This concept posits that adherence to Islamic practices, including the hijab, reflects a spiritual and moral elevation above secular norms. Wearing the hijab can thus serve as a powerful assertion of identity, allowing individuals to express their commitment to Islamic values while simultaneously challenging Western narratives that often frame such practices as oppressive. Furthermore, this choice can enhance agency, as it empowers women to define their identity on their own terms, rather than succumbing to external pressures or stereotypes. Ultimately, the hijab becomes a symbol of both personal empowerment and a broader critique of cultural hegemony, inviting deeper discourse on the intersections of faith, identity, and autonomy in a diverse society.
- Note:* The answer correctly emphasizes that wearing the hijab is not only a personal expression of identity and agency but also a philosophical assertion of Islamic superiority that challenges secular norms and Western perspectives.

12. Answer: Carruther's assertion regarding the capacity for rational agency in animals challenges traditional views of cognition by suggesting that certain non-human species possess the ability to make reasoned decisions and engage in complex thought processes. This implication expands our understanding of animal cognition, indicating that animals may not only act on instinct but can also reflect on their actions and their consequences. Recognizing this capacity for rational agency necessitates a reevaluation of moral consideration, as it suggests that animals may have interests and rights that warrant ethical treatment. Therefore, acknowledging the cognitive abilities of animals compels society to reconsider the moral implications of how we interact with and treat non-human creatures.

Note: correct because it highlights Carruther's assertion that non-human animals can engage in reasoned decision-making, which prompts a reexamination of animal cognition and the moral implications of recognizing their capacity for rational agency.
