

Multiple Choice

1. Answer: A

Options: A) a subtler form of prejudice, masked by nationalist pride; B) a post-modern deconstruction of racist ideas to reveal their lack of depth; C) racist practices found in newly emerging areas of social life, such as cyberspace; D) an anti-fascist movement which challenges nationalist politics

Note: The 'new racism' is characterized by a more covert and insidious form of discrimination that often disguises itself as expressions of nationalism, rather than overtly hostile attitudes, thereby perpetuating systemic inequalities while appearing socially acceptable.

2. Answer: D

Options: A) a reduction in population size, caused by a higher rate of emigration than immigration; B) a change in the principal causes of death and disease since industrialization; C) increased birth and death rates, resulting in a relatively young population; D) a decline in the birth rate, greater life expectancy, and an ageing population

Note: The correct answer reflects the key stages of the demographic transition model, which describes the shift from high birth and death rates to lower birth rates and increased life expectancy, resulting in an ageing population.

3. Answer: C

Options: A) shared working conditions in the manufacturing industry; B) the class consciousness of members of the proletariat; C) local communities, extended kinship networks and shared leisure pursuits; D) collective aspirations to move into the middle class

Note: The correct answer reflects the sociological understanding that traditional working-class identity was deeply rooted in localized social structures, where community ties, family relationships, and collective recreational activities fostered a sense of belonging and shared identity among individuals.

4. Answer: C

Options: A) criminals were socialized into an 'underworld' of crime; B) no act is intrinsically deviant; C) biological failings drove some people into crime; D) women were less likely to be arrested than men

Note: Lombroso argued that criminal behavior is largely influenced by biological and physiological traits, suggesting that certain individuals are born with predispositions that lead them to engage in criminal activity.

5. Answer: B

Options: A) the proportion of people living alone has fallen to 29%; B) many people are cohabiting in long term relationships; C) the upward curve of remarriages compensates for the drop in first marriages; D) all of the above

Note: The correct answer is supported by the sociological observation that an increasing number of individuals are choosing to cohabit in long-term relationships instead of marrying, reflecting a shift in societal norms and values regarding commitment and partnership.

True / False

6. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Pluralist theories emphasize that power is distributed among various interest groups and social classes, rather than being concentrated in a single ruling elite from one class background.

7. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Cultural restructuring involves revitalizing urban areas and repurposing industrial spaces to enhance economic and social vitality, which includes initiatives such as regenerating declining cities, transforming industrial sites into tourist attractions, and utilizing media advertising to promote these changes.

8. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: Marx predicted that class polarization would lead to the decline of the middle classes and the emergence of a more distinct proletariat and bourgeoisie, rather than the growth of intermediate strata within the middle classes.

9. Answer: True

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: The ecological approach to urban sociology emphasizes the dynamics of social groups as they occupy and compete for urban spaces and resources, highlighting the patterns of settlement and interaction influenced by environmental factors.

10. Answer: False

Options: A) True; B) False

Note: The duration of ethnographic research does not determine whether the data is qualitative or quantitative; rather, ethnographic research is characterized by its focus on understanding social phenomena through qualitative methods, such as participant observation and interviews, regardless of the time frame.

Long Form Response

11. Answer: Domhoff identifies several key processes of decision-making in the USA, including the role of elite networks, the importance of institutional settings, and the influence of public opinion. However, he notably omits the exploitation process from his framework, which can be critically analyzed as a significant oversight. The exploitation process, which involves the manipulation of economic and social resources to disadvantage certain groups, is integral to understanding power dynamics and inequality in decision-making. By excluding this aspect, Domhoff's framework may overlook how systemic inequalities inform and constrain the choices available to various social classes. This omission could lead to a limited understanding of the socio-political landscape and the mechanisms that sustain elite dominance.

Note: correct because it accurately outlines Domhoff's decision-making processes while critically noting the omission of the exploitation process, emphasizing its importance in understanding power dynamics and social inequality.

12. Answer: Social stratification refers to the hierarchical arrangement of individuals in society based on factors such as wealth, power, education, and social status. This system significantly impacts individuals' mobility, as those at the top often have greater access to resources and opportunities, making it easier for them to maintain their status while hindering those at lower levels from moving up. The implications for society are profound; social stratification can perpetuate inequality and limit social cohesion, leading to tensions and conflict among different social groups. Furthermore, it shapes individuals' life chances, influencing their health, education, and overall quality of life, ultimately affecting societal stability and progress. Understanding social stratification is crucial for addressing issues of inequality and fostering a more equitable society.

Note: The answer accurately defines social stratification and explains how it affects individual mobility and perpetuates societal inequality, highlighting the relationship between hierarchical structures and access to resources.